Intended for	Doctoral and postdoctoral researchers

This workshop offers an overview of creating an effective Curriculum Vitae optimized for the international academic job market, whether you are looking for teaching, research or administration positions. Designed for both those who are new to academic CV writing and those who are simply interested in revising their current CV, the workshop provides a basic template for all CVs as well as optional sections and information on non-traditional CVs. We will discuss who needs a CV and why, as well as what the nuts and bolts are that go into a CV; we will also examine a variety of professional samples – both “good” and “bad”. There will be a presentation on effective CV writing, with exercises on how to promote yourself and adapt your information according to the requirements of a given employer. Attendees are encouraged to bring their own CVs and examples of job offerings of interest. The workshop is aimed at doctoral students and postdocs, but is also open to more senior academics interested in updating their CV.
