To successfully complete the doctorate, it is not enough to submit the dissertation, but an oral examination must also be passed. This usually takes place in the form of a disputation, in which – depending on the requirements of the doctoral degree regulations of the respective faculty – after a presentation of the theses and results described in the dissertation, these must be defended in front of an examination committee.

In order to provide you with specific support in preparing for your disputation, the House of Young Talents is offering individual disputation counselling sessions this winter semester, in which you can clarify questions about the disputation process (at your faculty) and how best to prepare for it and/or discuss your disputation presentation with us. Who from the HYT team will carry out the counselling with you will be decided based on the subject-specific suitability and your specific concerns.

When registering, please specify in the comments field of our registration form which particular issues you would like to discuss in the counselling session and when a counselling appointment would be suitable for you. We will then get back to you with specific date options.
